I am thinking of sowine the latter by Received and the seed of the seed plant of August of the clover is small, it has done its duty in saving loss of fertility in the winter, and if let alone till it blooms it will do great good. Better examination the roots and see if any nodules have formed. If they have, there is no doubt that the sell will be inoculated. I have often known the first sowing to bring in the inoculation. If there are no nodules on the roots, you had better get a culture next fall and inoculate the seed. You are right about sowing the last of August or early September.

Pollard Spends Day in Norfolk Preparing Material for Prosecution.

BY GUS MALBERT.

Norfolk, Va., April 1 .-- John Garland Pollard, Attorney-General of Virginia, spent the entire day here in and their larvae will eat the stems and destroy the vines after they have run. They must be prevented at the start an effort to secure sufficient evidence upon which to convict the bookmakers upon which to convict the bookmakers at the Jamestown Jockey Club's track, where the spring racing meet began to-day. Mr. Pollard left Norfolk for Richmond to-night without divulging how far he had progressed in his efforts. This much, however, is known, an arrest will be made in a very few days, and when that arrest comes, sufficient evidence will be in hand to secure a conviction. As the season is very late, the sweet peas may do well planted now, for mine, sown in January, are not yet up, and I shall plant more still. It is best to defer planting dahlias till the first of June, for, planted early, they try to bloom in hot weather and make poor flowers. I usually find mine sprouted when I take them up from the hill where they were buried in the fall, and I clip off the sprouts to a single eye and keep them as cool as possible till ready to plant, for I want the flowers in the fall when they come MACK'S RECRUITS
